The Madding Crowd

Ralph Coates, Rs. 372.30.

Though this novel by John Galsworthy (1867–1933) was not received with the same enthusiasm in India as in Britain, it is interesting to note that it was translated into Malayalam.

The main character, Morel, is a man of simple tastes and a person of integrity. He is also a man of great compassion and a man of great courage. His story is one of struggle, of struggle against the forces of evil and of struggle against the forces of corruption.

The novel is a powerful condemnation of the British Raj and its policies in India. It is a story of the common man, of the man who is not afraid to speak out against the forces of evil.

The novel is also a story of the struggle against the forces of corruption. Morel is a man of integrity, a man who is not afraid to speak out against the forces of corruption. He is a man who is not afraid to stand up for what is right.

The novel is a story of the struggle against the forces of evil. Morel is a man of integrity, a man who is not afraid to speak out against the forces of evil. He is a man who is not afraid to stand up for what is right.
